Q.5 MICHAEL JACKSON: WAS THE KING OF POP OR PAUPER? 14

Michael Jackson, nicknamed the “King of Pop”, died in Los Angeles on June 25, 2009. The following information about his finances appeared in several newspaper reports after his death:

- Jackson owned 50 per cent in the Sony ATV music publishing joint venture that included much of the Beatles catalogue. His stake was valued at in $500 million to $1 billion. It has been used as collateral for multiple loans. The catalogue now has about $300 million in loans secured against it, held by Barclays.
- The Mijac catalogue that controls publishing rights to Jackson’s recordings is worth an estimated $50 to $100 million. Warner Music administers the catalogue and pays Mijac several million dollars in royalties each year. Jackson’s hits are reportedly encumbered by a $73 million loan.
- Jackson bought Neverland, the 2600-acres Santa Barbara ranch in 1988 for $17 million and fitted with fairground rides and a zoo for a further $35 million. Its value was estimated at $70 to $100 million before the singer’s death. Jackson defaulted on a loan with Fortress last year but narrowly avoided a foreclosure sale when Colony Capital bought the loan for $22.5 million. Colony Capital had already begun a multi-million dollar refurbishment. If Neverland is opened to the public, it could be a big earner. Elvis Presle’s Graceland makes $15 to $20 million a year profit.
- An accountant testified in 2005 that Jackson spent $20 million to $30 million more than he made each year.

Required:

1. Prepare Michael Jackson’s balance sheet on June 25, 2009 from the information available. You need to prepare separate balance sheets for the upper and lower range of the estimated amounts.
2. What additional information is required to prepare the balance sheet?
3. A commentator said: “Michael Jackson lived like a king but died awash in debt” - What do you think?
