Baurdhan Financial Services Pvt. Ltd. (Baurdhan), the largest microfinance institution in India, got an 'in principle' approval

16500 (3) P.T.O.

In April 2014 from India's central bank, the Reserve bank of India (RBI), to start full-fledged banking operations. Bandhan, which had been formed by Chandra Shekhar Ghosh (Ghosh) with the social motive of giving small loans to the asset-less poor in unbanked regions of India, would now have to change its business model to play on a bigger turf and on a larger scale. While transforming itself into a bank would give it benefits like access to cheaper funds and increased scope of operations, but the considerable liberty it enjoyed by being a microfinance entity would be lost.

Microfinance involves providing financial services to the needy and unbanked or underserved people of the world and customizing the products to suit their needs and convenience. While the history of microfinance can be traced back to the middle-ages, its more modern version was pioneered by the Grameen Bank of Bangladesh, Latin America's ACCION International and India's Self-employed Women's Association (SEWA).

Bandhan (meaning bonding and togetherness) was started as a Non-Government Organization (NGO) in 2001 in an attempt to eradicate poverty and raise the living standard of the millions of impoverished in India by taking financial services to them.

In February 2013, the RBI invited applications for new banking licenses, to be accompanied by the applicant's proposed model for a bank. The objective was to increase competition in the banking industry. In April 2014, RBI announced its decision to accept Bandhan's proposal and granted it 'in principle' banking license that required it to start the operations of its bank within eighteen months.

Questions :

- Analyze the challenges lying ahead for 'Bandhan' and explore ways and means to overcome those challenges.
- Recognize and evaluate the challenges faced in the transformation of an organization, particularly of a social venture into a commercial one and study how to unite their goals and actions.
- Discuss the operations of a microfinance institution taking 'Bandhan' as a case in point and appreciate the constraints and the challenges faced by it, with the prime focus on India.
