22. Holi is one of the most important festivals of the Indians. It is held to celebrate the advent of spring. The spring is the best of all seasons. Flowers are blossoming in the fields and Nature looks gay and beautiful. People neither shiver with cold nor perspire with extreme heat in this season. It is the season of joy and mirth.

This festival commemorates the victory of Lord Krishna over the demon Merbasura. A story goes about this festival that Lord Krishna Killed the demon, Merbasura, to protect the people of Brindaban from his cruelties. After the fight Lord Krishna played with the blood of the demon among his lovers and friends.

Holi is celebrated throughout India. All people join in celebrating this festival irrespective of caste, age and sex. The Vaishnavas specially celebrate this festival. They worship Lord Krishna along with Radha swinging together. All day long the people indulge in Holi. They cover themselves with gulal and squirt coloured water at one another. Small children buy syringes (pichkaris) and rejoice discharging coloured water at passers-by. Sometimes there are accidents which lead to free fights. Many times it becomes the cause of communal riots in India.

Young boys are seen parading the streets with blackened faces and coloured clothes. They make everyone, who may come across them, the target of their joke. They spare no one. Filthy abuse, obscene songs, coarse jokes spoil the beauty and gaiety of this happy and festive occasion. We must reform this festival and observe it in the right form and spirit-the enjoyment of spring.

Holi is almost a national festival in fact, In all countries, spring is enjoyed in one form or the other. After Holi, boys and men embrace one another as a mark of friendship and good-will. At night they enjoy themselves with dance and music.
